EDITOR'S NOTE

We tend to so easily judge people, as if it is our birth right! Someone is overweight, we judge them, a mom gives her child a gadget to stay engaged while she can exercise, we judge her, a colleague just passes by without flashing the usual smile, we judge and get offended, oh and when it comes to the foreign language which we have embraced more than our own mother tongue, we judge someone for not being as fluent, just to name a few. Do we for a minute, pause and think, the various battles each one fights within themselves to be who they are. The one who is overweight is probably starving to lose weight, the mom is just trying to stay fit and have some “me time”, that colleague may be going through some personal loss which probably took away that smile, (why don't you flash your smile, instead) the one not so fluent in English wouldn't have had the opportunity to go to a fancy school as you and I did . So what gives us the right to judge people on how they look, or how they behave. The only thing we can do is keep reflecting on ourselves, be grateful for all that we have and be empathetic towards people around us. At NSN, we don't judge or brand children for their academic performance. Each child is unique and each one's potential is celebrated.

SACRED SPACE

Editor's note continues.....

The month of November was one, seeped into values, as we celebrated Infini Day on the 11th of November, giving children the perfect platform to reflect on themselves, to be grateful and to be empathetic towards people around them.

DAY 3 : I am unique

Students wrote an adjective for every letter of their names and posted in the padlet.

DAY 4 : My life my responsibility

Students wrote one skill that they developed in the last one year and posted a picture showing the same.

DAY 5 : Gratitude and disturbance cannot coexist

Students wrote 11 things that they are grateful for in the jamboard/padlet.

DAY 6 : To love and to be loved

Students made a picture collage of what is closest to their heart when it comes to nature and wrote few lines on what they learn from the same.

DAY 7 : The power of counter choices to consequences

Students spoke about a challenging situation that they faced and what they did to overcome the same.

DAY 8 : To be. To do. To have. To give

Students were asked to sign a petition which was raised for a cause.

DAY 9 : Energy plus Intelligent Effort plus Faith in The Energy.

Students made a growth chart of one of the 11 trailblazers from the book, The Breakthrough.

DAY 10 : Desires become deservingness only through Consistent Directed Self-motivated Intelligent Effort.

Students designed a strategy To Achieve their fitness Goal through a mind map.

DAY 11 : Accept the unchangeable. Change the changeable. Remove yourself from the unacceptable.

Students categorized situations of their life, into the circle of concern and circle of influence, and reflected on what can be changed and what cannot!

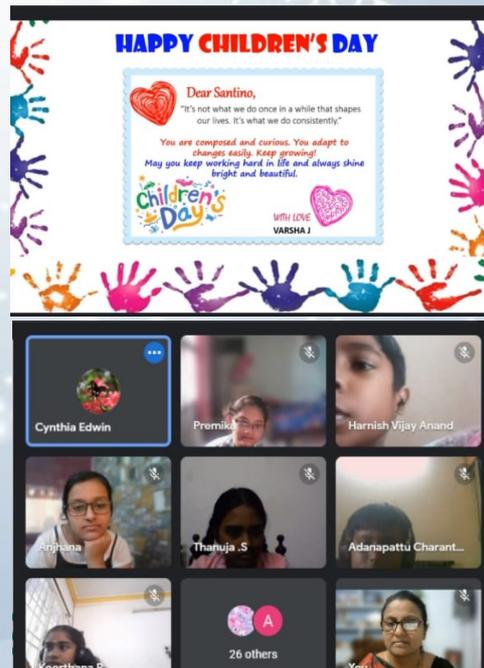

Motivational Talk was given by the students on Zoom to students of other schools.

The recorded video was also shared to few other schools.

CHILDREN'S DAY CELEBRATION

Virtual Children's Day was celebrated on 13/11/21 from LKG to Std XII to bring joy and happiness to the children. The event began with a variety of fun filled activities for each level. KG students were taken on a virtual tour to the Circus. Std 1 and 2 students were asked to speak about their favourite colour. They were also taken on a virtual tour to view the Monuments of India. Std 3 to 5 students were given a platform to exhibit their talents. Middle School children were given an activity on 'Sentence Stems' which let students to come up with lot of interesting and funny answers. Children themselves laughed boisterously at their answers. Std IX to XII students were asked to talk about the person whom they idiolize. Another interesting segment, sharing a flipbook was the most favourite one as the flipbook highlighted about the student's unique and special qualities. Teachers were excited to share the flipbook as it portrayed their love and affection to their beloved children. Some students even made thank you cards for their teachers. The day ended with wonderful memories lingering in everyone's mind.
